Introduction

Waldorf education is designed to provide its students with broad skill sets and a wide range of interests, giving them many options in life and allowing them to find fulfilling vocations. Seventy-five years after the founding of the first Waldorf school in the United States and with the tremendous growth of Waldorf schools across the country, it is time to look in a systematic way at what happens to Waldorf graduates: How many go on to college? Which colleges accept Waldorf graduates, and to which colleges do they choose to go? How many do not go directly to college, and what do they do instead?

This first phase in a two-part survey examined these questions by gathering data collected in 2004–2005 in the United States and Canada from twenty-seven Waldorf high schools reporting on what their graduates from the past ten years did in the year following graduation. Phase Two will look at career choices, how Waldorf graduates are perceived by their professors and employers, and how well Waldorf education prepared them for life and the challenges of today's world. Both phases of this survey will be useful to enrollment coordinators, marketing/outreach directors, college counselors, parents deciding where to enroll their children, and students graduating from Waldorf schools across the country.

The results of the first phase of this survey show that the vast majority of Waldorf graduates go to an enormous range of colleges and universities. Some take a year off to explore the world or, go directly into a trade that feels meaningful to them. These results suggest that Waldorf education does in fact produce free-thinking individuals with a broad range of interests.

The Growth of the Waldorf School Movement in the United States

The number of Waldorf schools has grown dramatically over the last decade, highlighting the urgency for a survey such as this one. Over the last thirty years, the number of Waldorf schools affiliated with the Association of Waldorf Schools of North America (AWSNA) has grown from fewer than ten in 1970, to more than one hundred and sixty as of December 2004.

Number of Waldorf Schools in the U.S., 1928-2004¹

Most of these schools started with the younger grades and grew one grade each year; thus it takes quite a long time before a school considers starting a high school. As the schools founded in the 1980s mature, the number of high schools is increasing quite dramatically: in the last decade the number of Waldorf high schools has grown from 15 to 37. Only a few Waldorf high schools are not directly affiliated with a Waldorf elementary school.

In 1995 there were 13 Waldorf high schools with graduating classes in North America,² for which we have information on 164 graduates (see Appendix A for school information submitted). By 2004 there were 29

Waldorf high schools with graduating classes, and there is information on 438 graduates from that year. There are also currently 8 high schools in North America that do not yet have graduating classes; they are not included in this survey, but their existence shows that this growth trend is continuing.

Previous Studies on Waldorf Graduates

In the United States, there have been two major studies on Waldorf graduates prior to this one:

- The first Waldorf Alumni Survey was conducted in 1987. Sponsored by the Association of Waldorf Schools of North America and funded by the Waldorf Educational Fund of the Glenmede Trust Company, this survey sent out 2,400 questionnaires and received 710 in reply. This survey brought in useful statistical and anecdotal results from nine Waldorf high schools and was a good start in surveys of this nature.
- The second was the Association of Waldorf Schools of North America Graduate Survey—1994. This project was conducted to gain insights into the ways that former students of Waldorf schools view the benefits and weaknesses of their education. There were some significant flaws in the research design and implementation, which are described in the conclusion of that survey. In design, the questionnaire contained open-ended questions that made it difficult to tabulate results or establish relative weights of strengths/weaknesses. In implementation, the questionnaires were given to schools to distribute and collect and so were distributed in vastly different ways and to different groups of students. Some schools even changed the phrasing of the questions sent out.

The survey for this study was different from the prior studies in that it was primarily quantitative instead of qualitative. By using information collected by schools instead of relying on graduates to return surveys, major trends could be tracked in a way that was not possible with open-ended questions.

Methodology of the Research

How the Information Was Collected

For this survey, there were two major sources of information: Waldorf high schools with graduating classes and the Association of Waldorf Schools of North America (AWSNA).

Information from Waldorf High Schools

Surveys were sent out starting in September 2004 to 27 Waldorf high schools with graduating classes. This survey requested information on how many graduates they had had each year from 1995 to 2004, inclusive; how many went to college directly after high school and to which colleges they went; and how many did not go to college directly after high school and what they did instead. A copy of the survey is included in Appendix E. All 27 high schools returned the survey, giving information on 2,776 Waldorf graduates. A complete list of information collected from each Waldorf high school can be found in Appendix A.

Information from the Association of Waldorf Schools of North America (AWSNA)

The survey contains 4,376 college acceptances (regardless of whether students later attended these institutions) from 1995–2004, inclusive. This information was taken from data collected by AWSNA: a compilation of graduate surveys collected from 1995–2000 and lists of acceptances submitted by schools in their AWSNA Annual Reports for 2001–2004. For a complete list of information compiled on college acceptances, see Appendix A.

How the Information Was Analyzed

Information was entered into a database in ACCESS specifically designed for this project³ and is divided by year, by region, and by high school age.

Year

For college acceptances and attendance, the aggregate over the span of the survey is given along with a breakdown for 2004 to see recent trends of where Waldorf graduates apply and attend. In looking at trends in the number of students not going directly to college, a year-by-year breakdown from 1995 through 2004 is examined. A graph showing the number of Waldorf high school graduates demonstrates the growth of this movement over time.⁴

Region

The regional breakdown was based on the Time Zone in which the school is located. As can be seen in the table below, the vast majority of Waldorf high schools are located in the Eastern or Pacific region, with only a few schools situated in the middle of the country. For a list of which Waldorf high schools fall into which category, refer to Appendix B.

Waldorf High Schools by Region in 2004
Region	Number of Waldorf High Schools
Eastern	10
Central	4
Mountain	3
Pacific (includes Hawaii)	7
Canada	3
Total	27

Age of the Waldorf School

For purposes of this survey the high schools are categorized as Mature, Medium, or Young, based on the year of their first graduating class, as described below. As previously mentioned, there are also 8 high schools in North America that do not yet go up through the 12th grade and, therefore, were not included in the survey. For a list of Waldorf high schools by age, refer to Appendix A.

Number of Waldorf High Schools by Age in 2004
Age Category	1 st Graduating Class	Number of Schools in this Survey
Mature	1994 or earlier	11
Medium	1995-1999	6
Young	2000-2004	10
Total		27

Categorizing Colleges and Universities

In order to categorize the types of Colleges that Waldorf graduates have attended, the Carnegie Classification of Institutions of Higher Learning was used. This is the leading typology of American Colleges and Universities and is the framework by which institutional diversity of U.S. higher education is commonly described. We have modified this list slightly to include foreign universities. For a list of Carnegie Classifications, see Appendix C. For a complete list of colleges and universities in the U.S. and how they are classified, visit the Carnegie Classifications website, http://www.carnegie foundation.org/Classification/CIHE 2000/PartII files/partII.htm.

Data Analysis

What Types of Colleges Accept Waldorf Graduates?

An impressively diverse number of institutions accept Waldorf graduates: in 2004 alone, the 438 graduates were accepted at 342 different colleges. Over the course of this survey, Waldorf graduates were accepted by 717 accredited colleges and universities, spanning 18 of the 20 types of institutions in the Carnegie Classification system. The two categories in which Waldorf graduates registered no acceptances were Specialized Institutions—Schools of law and Tribal colleges and universities.

Within this diversity, some colleges stand out as accepting larger numbers of Waldorf graduates: Oberlin College in Ohio and Bard College in New York State top the list by a significant margin. Following is a table containing the top ten colleges in accepting Waldorf graduates. For a complete listing of colleges and universities accepting Waldorf graduates for the period covered this survey, see Appendices D and E.

Top Colleges in Accepting Waldorf High School Graduates 1995–2004, inclusive
University Name and Location	Number of Students
Oberlin College, Oberlin, OH	82
Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, NY	72
University of California-Santa Cruz, CA	57
University of Colorado, Boulder, CO	56
Hampshire College, Amherst, MA	55
Lewis & Clark College, Portland, OR	48
Earlham College, Richmond, IN	45
Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, NY	45
Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, NY	44
Capilano College, N. Vancouver, CANADA	43

With the exception of UC Santa Cruz and the University of Colorado, these are all small private liberal arts colleges. However, as the data below suggests, a surprisingly large number of Waldorf graduates opt to enroll in large universities.

Trends over Time

The year 2004 is interesting to look at compared to the aggregate. Four of the top ten colleges accepting Waldorf high school graduates in 2004 are not on the aggregate top ten list (University of Puget Sound, Mount Holyoke College, San Francisco State University, and Willamette University). This may well reflect the growing number of Waldorf high schools and their locations around the country, as well as colleges' increasing knowledge of Waldorf schools and experience with Waldorf high school graduates.

Capilano College, (43)	Earlham College, (7)

Regional Differences

As might be expected, there are significant variations in college acceptances by region. These differences are probably based on the choices of colleges to which Waldorf graduates applied. While that information was not collected for this survey, it is likely that high school graduates would tend to apply to colleges relatively close to home.

For Waldorf graduates in the Pacific region, the top 10 schools to accept them were all on the West coast. For the Eastern region, 8 out of the top 10 colleges were in the East, but interestingly the very top college, Oberlin College, is in the Midwest (Oberlin, Ohio). Earlham College, at number 9, is also located in the Midwest (Richmond, Indiana). While Ohio and most parts of Indiana are in the Eastern Standard Time Zone, it is worth noting their location in the Midwest as opposed to being near the coast. For Canadian high school graduates, 8 of the top 10 accepting colleges are in Canada, with Oberlin College and Bard College being the only schools not in Canada.

The Central and Mountain regions were more diversified. The Central Waldorf graduates' top 10 acceptances included 6 colleges in the Central Time Zone and 4 in the East. The Mountain Waldorf graduates' top 10 acceptances included 6 colleges in the Mountain Time Zone, 2 in the Pacific Time Zone, and 2 in the Eastern Time Zone.

Differences Based on Age of the Waldorf School

The vast majority of Waldorf graduates over the course of this survey come from Mature Waldorf Schools:

Number of Graduates by Waldorf High Schools Age 1995-2004, Inclusive
School Age CategoryNumber of Graduates in this Survey
Mature	1,868
Medium	540
Young	368
Total	2,776

Additionally, Mature Waldorf high schools are heavily concentrated in the East (6 in the East and 3 in the Pacific region), while Medium and Young schools are much more evenly distributed.

Numbe	Number of Waldorf High Schools with Graduating Classes
		Eastern	Central	Mountain	Pacific	Canada
Mature		6	0	0	3	2
Medium		1	2	2	1	0
Young		3	2	1	3	1

When analyzing the differences in college acceptances across this category, it appears that geography plays a much greater role than school age: New York University accepted 36 students from Mature Waldorf high schools, but does not appear in the top 20 accepting colleges for either Medium or Young schools; this is most likely because of the number of Mature Waldorf schools on the East Coast. Likewise, the University of Colorado at Boulder accepted 39 students from Medium schools, but does not appear in the top 20 accepting colleges for graduates from Mature Waldorf schools, as there are no Mature Waldorf high schools in the Mountain region. Despite these regional differences, however, the top 3 colleges accepting graduates from Mature high schools (University of California at Santa Cruz, Oberlin College in Oberlin, Ohio, and Bard College in Annandale-on-Hudson, New York) appear in the top 12 accepting colleges for graduates from all three categories: Mature, Medium, and Young high schools.

Which Colleges Do Waldorf Graduates Attend?

Waldorf graduates choose to attend a wide range of colleges and universities. In fact it is notable that within a graduating class at a given school, there were generally very few people going to the same college as their classmates. In 2004 alone, the 438 Waldorf graduates attended 201 different colleges.

Top Colleges Attended by Waldorf Graduates 1995-2004, Inclusive
University Name	Number of Students Attended	Number of Students Accepted	Percentage of Acceptances that Attend
Oberlin College , Oberlin, OH	47	82	57.3%
Capilano College , N. Vancouver, Canada	43	N/A ⁵	N/A
University of California-Santa Cruz, CA	36	57	63.2%
Bard College , Annandale-on-Hudson, NY	34	72	47.2%
University of Colorado, Boulder, CO	31	56	55.4%
Hampshire College, Amherst, MA	26	55	47.3%
Earlham College, Richmond, IN	23	45	51.1%
New York University, New York, NY	22	41	53.7%
California State University- Northridge, CA	20	23	86.96%
Mount Holyoke College , South Hadley, MA	20	38	52.6%

It is not surprising to see Oberlin at the top of the list of the top 10 colleges that Waldorf graduates have attended directly after high school graduation. However, it is interesting to note that 4 of the 10 are large universities, belying the impression that most Waldorf graduates go to small liberal arts schools.

Regional Differences

Waldorf graduates tend to attend colleges in their own geographical areas. For the most part, the top 10 accepting colleges for a given area are also the top 10 attended colleges.

Carnegie Classifications

In looking at the types of institutions that Waldorf graduates attended, some 32.24% go to universities that contain Masters or Doctoral programs. An additional 27.27% of Waldorf graduates go to liberal arts baccalaureate colleges.

Even though many people view Waldorf schools as "arts schools that encourage graduates to go into the arts," only 3.95% of Waldorf graduates go to Specialized Institutions–Schools of art, music, and design (Carnegie Classifications). While many students specialize in the arts at more generalized institutions which would not show up in this survey, this number is still much lower than many might expect. 1.2% attend other specialized institutions (engineering and technical schools, business and management, etc.), although again many more students may study these subjects at state universities or other colleges. 7.2% of Waldorf graduates go to associate colleges, and 6.48% of Waldorf graduates go to colleges or universities outside of the United States.

Graduates Not Going Directly to College

Of the 2,776 Waldorf high school graduates in this survey, 633 did not go directly to college (22.8%). Of these, we have no information on future plans for 96 students. Of the remaining 537 students, nearly half (39.7% or 213 students) were either accepted to a college and deferred admission for a year, announced plans to enroll in college after a year of work or travel, or were pursuing the Ontario Academic Credit (OAC), an interim step for many Canadian students to go to universities in Ontario.⁶ This number (213 students) represents 7.6% of all Waldorf high school graduates in this survey. 86 students (3.1% of Waldorf high school graduates) went into training, education, or work/internship for a specific trade, or into community service. An additional 133 students (4.8%) were reported to go on to 'work' with no area or future plans specified. Of the total, 10 students (0.03%) joined the Armed Services.

While some schools keep detailed records of what graduates not going directly to college were planning to do, others keet little or no record at all. However, from those that did keep records, it is apparent that students deciding not to go directly to college are having rich life experiences. For anecdotal evidence, take this record from High Mowing's graduates' plans in 2003, when 8 of their 26 graduates that year did not go directly to college. These eight students' plans were: 1– train with a stonemason; 2– backpack and record music; 3– work for the Coast Guard; 4– join a circus; 5– become a comedian; 6– travel; 7– work on art; 8– 'work,' unspecified field. The diversity seen at High Mowing also occurs in schools of every category.

Trends over Time

The percentage of Waldorf students overall who do not go directly to college each year has been relatively stable over the past decade, ranging from 18.8% to 24.7%.

Age of the Waldorf School

One question in the researchers' minds was whether the age of the Waldorf school affected the number of graduates going directly to college. The results are difficult to interpret, as the high percentage of students at Canadian schools taking an extra year for the Ontario Academic Certificate skews the results for the Mature category significantly (see Regional Differences, below). Including the Canadian schools, the percentage of students at Mature schools not going directly to college stands at 23.67%. Excluding the Canadian schools, however, reveals the following trends (see table below), showing that for the most part, the younger schools do in fact have higher percentages of students who choose not to go directly to college.

Waldorf School Age Differences Students Not Going Directly to College 1995–2004, Inclusive
School Category Number of Students Total Number of Graduates Percentage
Mature (without Canadian schools)	270	1,508	17.9%
Medium	100	540	18.5%
Young	91	368	24.7%

Regional Differences

As mentioned above, the Canadian schools have a significantly higher rate of students not going directly on to college than do their United States counterparts. In addition to study for the OAC in Ontario, there is an established tradition (common in England and other parts of Europe as well) for high school graduates to engage in what they call a "Gap Year." The idea is by taking a year to travel, do community service, work or engage in other experiences, young people will serve themselves well by being more focused in their studies or whatever they choose to do later in life.

Regional Differences Students Not Going Directly to College 1995–2004, Inclusive
School Category Number of Students Total Number of Graduates Percentage
Eastern	225	1,166	19.3%
Central	47	253	18.6%
Mountain	49	224	21.9%
Pacific	131	753	17.4%
Canada	181	377	48.0%

Conclusions and Further Research

Conclusions

The major conclusion from this survey is that Waldorf graduates are accepted to and attend a wide variety of colleges and universities with a broad geographical distribution. Geographical location of the Waldorf school affects college attendance more than age of the Waldorf school; however, age of the Waldorf school correlates inversely with a higher percentage of students from younger schools deciding not to go directly to college.

A significant portion of Waldorf graduates (22.8%) choose to not go directly to college. This number is significantly higher in Canadian schools (48%), where a "Gap Year" is commonly encouraged and additional study for the Ontario Academic Certificate was previously required.

Shortcomings of the Survey

Because this study was retrospective, the completeness of each questionnaire depended heavily on how much of this information each school had collected over the past decade. In general, most schools kept information on which colleges their graduates attended; however, the level of data collected on students not going directly to college varied widely. There is significant under-representation in regards to the college acceptance information. Collected from the Annual Reports that schools submitted to AWSNA, the information submitted by member schools was highly varied in content and format: some reported only students' future plans, others gave lists of colleges to which their graduates had been accepted, but with no numbers attached to them. For a complete list of information compiled on college acceptances, see Appendix A.

Recommendations

As Waldorf schools continue to proliferate and mature, it is important to track information on the future plans of Waldorf graduates. Collection of this data should be further standardized in Delegates' reports to AWSNA, and New Initiatives and Developing Schools should be encouraged to start collecting this information in a standardized way from the time of their first graduating class. Future studies should consider being prospective instead of retrospective.

Further Research

As previously mentioned, this study is the first phase in a two-part study, and will form the foundation upon which further research will rest. Phase 2 will go much more deeply into the lives of Waldorf graduates. The researchers will target randomly selected graduates with the longest tenure at their respective Waldorf schools from the classes of 1994, 1996, 1998, 2000, and 2002. The students will be asked to provide the names of their employers or several college professors. The researchers will then call these individuals and ask them specific questions about the students. The researchers are most interested in determining the level of emotional intelligence, social awareness, cognitive flexibility, and unique qualities and deficiencies the students brought to the class or work situation.

The study will ascertain how many of these students graduated from a university or college, how many went on to graduate school, and what occupations they engaged in after college, revealing the range of vocations and careers. The students themselves will be asked to comment on their Waldorf and college experiences, evaluate their own physical and mental health, assess their life values (which will be evaluated based on a blind research model, or other statistically accepted model, so that the information can be quantified). We will ask about their personal long-term commitments to partners and how they value close relationships.

In the end we hope to have both anecdotal and statistical information to evaluate.

Appendix C Listing of Carnegie Classifications

The 2000 Carnegie Classification includes all colleges and universities in the United States that are degree-granting and accredited by an agency recognized by the U.S. Secretary of Education. The 2000 edition classifies institutions based on their degree-granting activities from 1995–96 through 1997–98. For purposes of this study, we added one additional category containing all degree-granting colleges or universities outside of the United States.

Code	Carnegie Classification
15	Doctoral/Research Universities—Extensive
16	Doctoral/Research Universities—Intensive
21	Master's Colleges and Universities I
22	Master's Colleges and Universities II
31	Baccalaureate Colleges—Liberal Arts
32	Baccalaureate Colleges—General
33	Baccalaureate/Associate's Colleges
40	Associate's Colleges
51	Specialized Institutions—Theological seminaries and other specialized faith- related institutions
52	Specialized Institutions—Medical schools and medical centers
53	Specialized Institutions—Other separate health profession schools
54	Specialized Institutions—Schools of engineering and technology
55	Specialized Institutions—Schools of business and management
56	Specialized Institutions—Schools of art, music, and design
57	Specialized Institutions—Schools of law
58	Specialized Institutions—Teachers colleges
59	Specialized Institutions—Other specialized institutions
60	Tribal colleges and universities
101	Foreign College or University

Definitions of Classifications:¹

Doctorate-granting Institutions

Doctoral/Research Universities—Extensive: These institutions typically offer a wide range of baccalaureate programs, and they are committed to graduate education through the doctorate. During the period studied, they awarded 50 or more doctoral degrees¹ per year across at least 15 disciplines.³

Doctoral/Research Universities—Intensive: These institutions typically offer a wide range of baccalaureate programs, and they are committed to graduate education through the doctorate. During the period studied, they awarded at least ten doctoral degrees¹ per year across three or more disciplines,² or at least 20 doctoral degrees per year overall.

Master's Colleges and Universities

Master's Colleges and Universities I: These institutions typically offer a wide range of baccalaureate programs, and they are committed to graduate education through the master's degree. During the period studied, they awarded 40 or more master's degrees per year across three or more disciplines.²

Master's Colleges and Universities II: These institutions typically offer a wide range of baccalaureate programs, and they are committed to graduate education through the master's degree. During the period studied, they awarded 20 or more master's degrees per year.

Baccalaureate Colleges

Baccalaureate Colleges—Liberal Arts: These institutions are primarily undergraduate colleges with major emphasis on baccalaureate programs. During the period studied, they awarded at least half of their baccalaureate degrees in liberal arts fields.³

Baccalaureate Colleges—General: These institutions are primarily undergraduate colleges with major emphasis on baccalaureate programs. During the period studied, they awarded less than half of their baccalaureate degrees in liberal arts fields.³

Baccalaureate/Associate's Colleges: These institutions are undergraduate colleges where the majority of conferrals are at the subbaccalaureate level (associate's degrees and certificates). During the period studied, bachelor's degrees accounted for at least ten percent but less than half of all undergraduate awards.

Associate's Colleges

These institutions offer associate's degree and certificate programs but, with few exceptions, award no baccalaureate degrees.⁴ This group includes institutions where, during the period studied, bachelor's degrees represented less than 10 percent of all undergraduate awards.

Specialized Institutions

These institutions offer degrees ranging from the bachelor's to the doctorate and typically award a majority of degrees in a single field. The list includes only institutions that are listed as separate campuses in the Higher Education Directory. Specialized institutions include:

Theological seminaries and other specialized faith-related institutions: These institutions primarily offer religious instruction or train members of the clergy.

Medical schools and medical centers: These institutions award most of their professional degrees in medicine. In some instances, they include other health professions programs, such as dentistry, pharmacy, and nursing.

Other separate health profession schools: These institutions award most of their degrees in such fields as chiropractic, nursing, pharmacy, and podiatry.

Schools of engineering and technology: These institutions award most of their bachelor's or graduate degrees in technical fields of study.

Schools of business and management: These institutions award most of their bachelor's or graduate degrees in business or business-related programs.

Schools of art, music, and design: These institutions award most of their bachelor's or graduate degrees in art, music, design, architecture, or some combination of such fields.

Schools of law: These institutions award most of their degrees in law.

Teachers colleges: These institutions award most of their bachelor's or graduate degrees in education or education-related fields.

Other specialized institutions: Institutions in this category include graduate centers, maritime academies, military institutes, and institutions that do not fit any other classification category.

Tribal Colleges and Universities

These colleges are, with few exceptions, tribally controlled and located on reservations. They are all members of the American Indian Higher Education Consortium.

NOTES ON DEFINITIONS

 Doctoral degrees are as defined in the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS) from the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES). This includes the Ph.D. in any field as well as other doctoral-level degrees such as the Doctor of Education, Doctor of Juridical Science, and Doctor of Public Health. It excludes degrees defined as first-professional degrees in IPEDS. For more information, see:

http://nces.ed.gov/ipeds

2. Distinct disciplines are determined by the 4-digit series of the Classification of Instructional Programs published by NCES. For more information, see:

http://nces.ed.gov/pubsearch/pubsinfo.asp?pubid=91396

- 3. Liberal arts fields include the following fields (as listed in the Classification of Instructional Programs): English language and literature/letters; foreign languages and literatures; biological sciences/life sciences; mathematics; philosophy and religion; physical sciences; psychology; social sciences and history; visual and performing arts; area, ethnic, and cultural studies; liberal arts and sciences, general studies and humanities; and multi/interdisciplinary studies.
- 4. This group includes community, junior, and technical colleges.

Appendix G Letter and Research Instrument

Dear Friends,

The last comprehensive study on what happens to Waldorf students after they graduate was done almost twenty years ago. Since the Waldorf movement has grown tremendously in the United States in that time, it is important to have up-to-date information on the effects of Waldorf education. Many thanks to the Research Institute for Waldorf Education for funding this project. The results will be useful for both marketing and fundraising, enabling schools to boost their enrollment and enrich their programs.

There are two significant parts to this project. The first part, for which we need the help of Waldorf high schools, is in reporting what colleges have accepted your graduates and what your graduates decide to do in the year following graduation. For the second part, we will be contacting graduates directly to ask how their Waldorf education has helped shape their lives.

For lists of all colleges that have accepted your graduates, we are counting on using the AWSNA Annual Reports. If there were any years when your college acceptances were not published in your Annual Report, please include those lists in the form below, or note that that information was not collected. For information on what your graduates decided to do after high school, please fill in the following form to the best of your ability.

Thank you so much for your help. In order for this study to be as accurate and comprehensive as possible, it is vital that we collect as much of this information as possible. The results will be a tool for all of us to use in strengthening our individual schools and the Waldorf movement all over the country.

Sincerely,

Faith Baldwin
